

★ ★ ★ More Information on Cemeteries

I AM NOT disappointed. My cemetery story is bringing responses. I hope to give due recognition to all of these in due time. Then perhaps we can eventually perfect what might be considered an authentic list of Johnson county cemeteries.

Mr. Ray Marner graciously informed me that I switched the names of Amish and Wagner cemeteries in Sharon township. His grandfather lies in the latter. The Amish cemetery is further identified as the Eash cemetery.

This mistake of mine seems almost as inexcusable. I lived for three years within less than a mile of the Wagner cemetery. But, worse yet, I did not then even know that it existed.

Again, Mr. Joel Slaubaugh, one of the Family Farmers of 100 years family ownership listed by the Farm Bureau, tells me that his grandfather, John Slaubaugh, was the first to be buried in Timber cemetery. He was buried in 1865. I listed Helena Miller in 1864.

Mr. Slaubaugh also told me of four cemeteries I missed in Washington township. These are: Wertz cemetery, north of Timber church; Shetler cemetery, west of Timber church; Cauffman cemetery, east of Timber church, and a cemetery somewhere north of Frytown.

This all shows how absolutely incomplete has been any list of Johnson county cemeteries that has ever been prepared. No official map that I saw and the list in the hands of the county engineer are all silent about these cemeteries.

One of these days I'll be heading south again to get more dates and correct discrepancies. In the meanwhile send in your information. Don't wait until you see me, you might forget. Take time to write me at once and give this information. Then I will share it with all.
